

THE HOLOCAUST WARS PROJECT

IMPLEMENTATION BOOKLET

The Extended JS Background

Written By: Jacob Sternberg

THE EXTENDED JS BACKGROUND

I. THE EXTENDED JS BACKGROUND

NOTE 1 – I AM A CONFIRMED HOLOCAUST SURVIVOR

- Born June 1938 – in the wrong place (Warsaw)
at the wrong time (one year prior to WWII)
- “Wrong Time” adequately describes a European disorder that leads to the worst war ever, the worst crimes ever, and hints at even worse things to come.
- “Wrong Time” specifically applies to a Jewish child. A berserk Totalitarian regime whose utopian Third Reich is seemingly existentially threatened by Jews, required to thoroughly exterminate Jewish children.
- It isn’t difficult to treat the Holocaust beast as a “Close and Personal” chapter.

NOTE 2 – A DRIFTWOOD OF WWII

- A lifelong friend, Professor Bencion Pinchuk (with whom I debated for over seven decades on things important and mundane, has characterized me as a “Driftwood of WWII, sculpted by obnoxious events.”) since he was an eminent historian and quite a mensch, I let this “tail on the donkey” stick. However, I consider myself quite lucky. To wit:
  1. I am deeply indebted to my parents for physical heroism involved in my survival. Hunger, cold and fear were managed.
  2. Just after the WWII ended, they provided me with the best possibly trauma recovery, consisting of: (a) For three years, six days a week, six hours per day, I was “stuffed” with math, science, and languages tutoring by university professors in Salzburg, Austria — a very clean, very Nazi place. Father was a smuggler who made much money to afford it all. (b) I had a Rabbi devoted to my “Yiddishkeit” education.

By the time I was nine years old, I spoke English, German, Yiddish, Hebrew and Russian with little Latin under duress. I could translate the five books of Moses, word for word, from Hebrew to Yiddish, knew how airplanes fly, could solve some decent math problems and later in life, I was the best student in every class I attended. (c) To combat possible training associated with fears, I was encouraged to travel all over Salzburg in a train by myself at age eight. Trained a bit for it and just did it. (d) The absence of early socialization with children, the absence of toys of any kind, were simply handled by my parents who had (arguably) a fifth-grade education with no psychological inputs to know that “no homework policy” leaves much time to play soccer, war games and chess with other boys and time to listen to BBC on the radio and really understand the MidEast Gordian Knot.

I am in awe of my remarkable parents whose LIFE WAS DESTROYED FOUR TIMES IN THE 20TH CENTURY. These events are an integral part of the Holocaust and our book will explain it all.

NOTE 3 – THE ISRAEL EFFECT

- I spent nearly four years (of the 12-year stay in Israel 1949-1960) in the Army, nearly two years as a paratroop officer. I was a competent warrior. I stood on Mt. Masada and uttered “NEVER AGAIN,” knowing precisely what it means. The reader should basically deduce that personally I will never consider myself a victim. I love Israel immensely and have no tolerance for blood libel generating people (whether Jewish or not) re Israel.

- The following opinion may sound strange to some people, but I'll state it anyway.

This classification of "Strangeness" stems from the fact that I am today a conservative ("Rightwing") holder of convictions that are driving the Left batty, and simultaneously I am proudly congratulating the Left for important achievements.

The book provides the facts preceding the formation of the Israeli State (1948) in which the youth movements of the Left, particularly the formers of the multiple Kibbutz settlements have turned a malaria riddled, vegetation denuded land into a productive region, run by dedicated pioneers.

The facts are compelling. The following example illustrates why I laud the Left for achievements.

Before getting to officers' school, I was near certain that I will graduate at the top or very near the top of the cadet corps, after all, given stellar education in Austria and continued private top schools in Israel, my knowledge base was much more extensive than the cadets who came from kibbutz settlements. My health classification was excellent, thus pointing to the ability to basically withstand the rigors of the course. My certainty of outcome increased. It didn't turn out that way. Although I came in respectably, it wasn't in top ten. It was all occupied by Kibbutz members. They were all quality leaders, well equipped in understanding of the terrain, in outsmarting their "enemy" and doing it all with least "noise." They were New Jews. The Kibbutz movement produced a cadre of superior military leaders that learned and taught how to defend their homes against marauding bands of terrorists and later attacks from formally trained militaries.

In analyzing what I call the "Israel Effect," the book deals with Israeli stellar achievements. To end this story, the course commander chose me to edit the course's publication and certified all of the articles.

In the long run, history is not kind to utopians of the Left (or any other essentially cults) and the country learned how to excel using the incentives of the “Profit Fetish.”

NOTE 4 – IT IS A NEW “BALLGAME.”

- The rise of Israel from the Holocaust’s ashes is an unequivocal signal that kicking Jews around is unacceptable and very, very expensive. The book justifies the above assertion. Much is changing in the MidEast ...

NOTE 5 – THE U.S.A. EFFECT

- It was relatively easy for me to convey the effect of what Israel did for me, as a “Finishing Source” for what I believe is a complete recovery from the trauma of early childhood. Here is what I told you so far:
  1. My parents devised a stiff educational program with university professors as tutors.
  2. They added my early “Independence Acquiring” – travelling in Salzburg by myself from age 8.
  3. They added a heavy load of Yiddishkeit knowhow.
  4. Getting me to Israel and,
    - (a) Enrolling me in top private schools
    - (b) Having me join a demanding youth movement
    - (c) Not insisting that I join them when they left for the U.S. when I was 18 years old (1956). Israel has installed the finishing touches that I needed to emerge as a non-victim, solid warrior, new and well-informed Jew.
- After “Paying My Taxes” – that is, serving in a fine brigade (“Nakhal” and later “Nakhal Muznakh”) – basically Kibbutz bound soldiers followed in the airborne brigade of paratroopers built from the same soldier pool for about four years, I came to the U.S. in 1960 and joined my parents and two brothers.

- Upon arrival in August 1960, I immediately became a lucky person, and with passing time, I became even luckier.
The facts are compelling:
  - (1) I immediately got a job in a research company.
  - (2) Due to technical proficiency, had my salary doubled and a few months later, doubled again.
  - (3) A dean at City College, bypassing regulation, matriculated me.
  - (4) My boss fired me because he believed I should go to college and gave me a $2,000 check escorting me out of the building.
  - (5) In less than six years (1966) of arrival to the U.S., I completed college and graduate school and became a professor at the graduate school of what is today NYU-Poly.
  - (6) Had my first invention in 1968 and set up a high-tech company and have had a long productive life.
- It is hard to convey the very simple idea that the U.S. is so immensely special/uniquely great and, simultaneously, so maligned by many I dub as Tom, Dick and Harry – including its own large contingent of its citizenry.

In multiple ways we convey in our books that:

- (1) Europe was a crime scene in three World Wars (Yes, three; the 1946-1991 was with the Revolutionary Soviet centered Totalitarian empire was the longest and quite mean)
The U.S. cleansed Europe each time and rescued winners and losers in legendary huge ways – never to be repaid.
- (2) The U.S. has been the world's economic engine, the sheriff who guarded all trade routes.
- (3) There was no disaster anywhere that the U.S. was not the first and massive responder.

The above is just a small set of the incredible U.S. generosity. The load was big and heavy and the sheriff is tired of helping the thankless.

- When specifically relating the U.S. to the Holocaust beast, it becomes apparent what the U.S. really did.
  - (1) To win WWII, it produced a liberty ship per day because the Nazis were proficient in hurting the convoys delivering everything (including cigarettes and chewing gum), it delivered tens of thousands of aircraft, military and civilian. The targets of largesse included Russia; and after the war, to anyone in the sewer called Europe (exclude Denmark and Great Britain from this characterization.)

[When the Nazis had a serious manpower shortage, they reverted to massive slave labor use. When the U.S. had a manpower shortage, it called on Rosie the Riveter. She not only came to the dance, she learned how to fly the planes she produced to the embarkation ports ...]
  - (2) Of all the largesse exhibited by the U.S., many, quite a large contingent of its citizenry, remember that the U.S. didn't increase its quota for escapees of the European wars. It is true. So, yes, the U.S. wasn't perfect. COMPARED TO WHOM?
  - (3) By supporting the humongous Marshal Plan, the U.S. did the lion's share of lifting the distressed and many displaced populations out of dire circumstances.

The book takes on all the aspects of the Holocaust and attempts to show the extreme U.S. effort – on all aspects, ranging from geopolitical, economic and particularly the humane – to get a better functioning world.